CAKE MAKING PRECEPTS.

Sweet milk makes heavy cake; sour milk makes light, spongy cake.

To have your cake fine grained beat thoroughly after the flour is added.

When a cake cracks open while baking the recipe contains too much flour.

The smaller the cake the better should the oven be. Large, rich cakes require slow baking.

Grease cake pans with lard or drippings, as butter is likely to make the cake stick on account of the salt in it.

Aged Coin in Lump of Coal.

While unloading soft coal the other day at Lacrosse, Wis., William Oberst dropped a huge chunk on his foot, says the Chicago Record-Herald.

The lump broke, and from it rolled a quaint coin ancient in design and rudely wrought from native copper. It is of the size of a common half dollar, but has no milled edges and is somewhat thicker. The markings are peculiar and have not been interpreted by any one yet. The coal in which it was imbedded was from a mine in Illinois.

Paper Mills.

The earliest European paper mills were at Fabriano, in Italy, in 1150. The Arabs first introduced the secret of paper making into Europe, they themselves having learned it from Chinese prisoners of war.
